We express our deepest gratitude to Almighty God for the publication of the latest issue of the Formosa Journal of Social Sciences (FJSS). This journal serves as an academic platform dedicated to disseminating research findings, literature reviews, and scholarly ideas in the field of social sciences, with a particular focus on social dynamics and human interaction.

As an international peer-reviewed journal, FJSS is committed to publishing high-quality, innovative, and relevant scholarly works that address contemporary social issues. The journal is published periodically in March, June, September, and December, contributing to the advancement of knowledge, especially in the field of social sciences.

This issue presents a diverse range of articles that reflect various perspectives and approaches in social science studies, covering topics such as public policy, management, education, and community social dynamics. It is expected that the articles in this issue will provide meaningful contributions both theoretically and practically for academics, researchers, practitioners, and policymakers.

We would like to express our sincere appreciation to all authors, reviewers, and the editorial team for their valuable contributions to this publication. We also extend our gratitude to our readers for their continued support in advancing scientific knowledge through academic publications.

Finally, we hope that this journal will serve as a valuable reference and inspire further high-quality research in the future.
